

EQUALIZERS FINISH WORK IN THE CAPE

Assessment on Elks Building Is Reduced From $10,460 to $8,000.

The County Board of Equalization yesterday continued its work and made several advances in the tax assessments. The board will be in session all this week and very likely for a few days next week before the general advance in tax assessments is completed.

A feature of the board's work yesterday was the reduction made in the assessment against the Elks' Club on the building owned by the club on Themis street. The assessment was lowered from $10,460 to $8,000.

NOTE ON FLOATER BLAMES HIS FAMILY

Body Taken From River at Neely's Landing Has Money and Jewelry.

The body of an unidentified man was taken from the Mississippi river at Neely's Landing Tuesday, and an inquest held by Justice of the Peace Julius P. Steger, found that the victim came to his death by suicide.

The body was found at the water's edge by William Patterson, a colored resident of Neely's Landing. Justice Steger, who lives a few miles from the scene, was notified by telephone that the body had been found. He drove to Neely's and held the inquest.

In searching the floater's clothing, Judge Steger found one $10 bill, one $2 bill, three $1 bills, an open-face key-wound watch, a pocket knife and four Lincoln pennies. The watch bore the name of Eugene Jackard & Co., St. Louis, which leads Judge Steger to believe that the dead man was a St. Louisian.

The money was wrapped in a small piece of paper, upon which was written: "My family forced me to do so. February 19, 1916." The note was written by a German, Judge Steger informed The Tribune yesterday.

The paper, which contained the bills, was wrapped with the watch in a black silk handkerchief containing wine-colored stripes and dots. The knife was double-bladed, but one of the blades had been broken off. On a plate on the handle of the knife were engraved the letters "N. H."

The body, which apparently had been in the river since the date the note bore, was dressed in a blue serge suit; No. 8 shoes, practically new; white shirt with black stripes; soft collar and black bow tie. The man apparently was about five feet, six inches in height and weighed about 175 pounds, Judge Steger said.

Justice Steger ordered an investigation to be made to try and learn if a man was missing from St. Louis, and if so, the authorities will be notified.

Following his recovery, he had been in good health until about ten days ago, when he suffered a serious hemorrhage of the nose. At that time he experienced considerable difficulty in checking the flow of blood.

Yesterday morning, when he complained of dizziness, he and his wife first believed that it must be a return of the bilious attack.

Last evening Mrs. Weiler could not decide whether or not to have Mr. Weiler's body removed to Carbondale, his former home, for burial or to have the interment in the Cape. The Elks Lodge, of which he was a member, will be in charge of the funeral, it was said at the home last night.

Mr. Weiler last Sunday celebrated his forty-third birthday with a sumptuous dinner at his home. He was born in 1873 in Lebanon, Ill., where his father is buried. Mr. Weiler's father died when he was but 12 years old. His father was a member of a family of pioneers who came to this country in the early days of the West.

Following the death of his father, the Weiler children moved with their mother to Chicago, where she died and was buried.

Mr. Weiler eventually went to St. Louis, where he became a traveling representative for a jewelry manufacturing company there.

One of his brothers, Louis Weiler, entered the jewelry business in Carbondale. After having been graduated through virtually all the ramifications of the jewelry business in St. Louis, and after having become a graduate optician, Mr. Weiler also went to Carbondale to enter business.

Twelve years ago he was married, and a year after his marriage he came to the Cape to open his jewelry store on Main street. Since his arrival in the Cape, Mr. Weiler has made friends with people from all sections of South-east Missouri. His store is known as carrying one of the most complete stocks of jewelry in this section of the State.

Mr. Weiler has a brother, Louis Weiler, living in Chicago, as well as a married sister, who also lives in Chicago.

In addition to his membership in the Elks lodge, Mr. Weiler was also a member of the Knights of Pythias and a member of the Yeomen's lodge.

When he was young his parents began educating him for the Catholic priesthood, but when he grew older he was unable financially to follow out the studies.
